D. C. L Fitzwilliams : Hints for the Home Guard, 1940: Training and Duties: Including the Methods of Defeating an Armed Man before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Hints for the Home Guard, 1940: Training and Duties: Including the Methods of Defeating an Armed Man:

First published in 1940, this vintage reproduction offers advice about how to protect your local community in the event of an enemy invasion of Great Britain. It has hints and tips for attacking suspicious visitors, defending villages, what to wear on patrol and how to spot and secure a German parachutist- a very real threat to the British homeland in 1940.

About the AuthorLieut-Colonel D. C. L FitzwilliamsExcerpt. © Reprinted by permission. Such then being the declared policy of the Germans, which they will certainly put into practice if they come here, they cannot complain if they are made to swallow a little of their own medicine. The answer then to the question of what to do with the Hun soldier is to kill him or wound him as severely as possible."
